Philippe Joannis

Philippe Joannis is a Leadership Development Mentor and Executive Coach and facilitator working with senior leaders and executive teams.

He is a senior executive himself, with extensive international business experience, a key expertise in global business development projects. As a key actor within the Apple ecosystem, he has been involved in co-designing and leading implementation of innovative business development strategies across multiple geos / cultures and implying various distribution channels, multiple stakeholders / actors and innovative « close-loop » marketing strategies based on a mix of online and offline customer experiences. As an executive coach, Philippe has an engaging approach and believes that self-awareness is empowerment and the key foundation for leadership growth. His adaptive style, based on the integral approach to coaching, supports a leader's ability to reframe key leadership challenges in ways that are developmental to the individual and constructive to the business. Philippe coaches senior level executives across lines of business and industries, resulting in noticeably improved leadership effectiveness.

Philippe lives between Paris and Brittany with his wife Cécile. As a student he used to be a street magician. He plays jazz piano, practices Aikido and is a competition bridge player.
