Sara works as Coach and Communication trainer with her focus on personal development.

Sara is teaching communication that will help to move the agenda forward and deepen relationships at the same time. In her coaching she helps to turn difficult conversations into joint learning and development. In her work she builds on her profound education of dialogue oriented counseling. She learned from pioneers in the field of transformative learning and development. In her coaching she supports her clients in achieving their most important goals. Her coaching offers an open and appreciative framework so that her clients can devote themselves to their own development challenges with curiosity and interest. In doing so, she helps to transform difficult challenges into exciting learning and development opportunities.

Prior to becoming an independent consultant Sara had a leadership position at an Health Care Institut. She was responsible for a team developing tools and instruments that fit to different healthcare systems and cultures in Europe and international. Among others she and her team developed and implemented a comprehensive integrated Quality Management System for reproductive health services in Kenya.
